

Casting the pilot of "The Chronicles of Honor," a new series. Synopsis: A weather anomaly from deep space devastates the planet Earth, shortly after the end of The Libyan War - the latest war in a series of bloody battles in the Middle East. After the storm subsides, over two billion humans are in a deep coma. Science awakens a few, who die horrible and painful deaths. The UN resolves to preserve the humans until science can safely awaken them. Cryogenically frozen for 1600 years, these humans are awakened in the late 36th century as former Earth colonies turn towards authoritarian philosophies from Earth's distant past. Peace has been preserved for centuries, but authoritarian encroachment threatens the universe. Ancient blood feuds reignite as the universe slowly marches towards war. The millennia-old Earth Union dissolves in disarray. Alliances are formed, and science turns from preserving life to stopping it.

In the midst of the chaos are the reawakened humans from the past. Among them is Matt Brown, an Air Force officer. He leads a squadron with the help of his close friend, Bobby "Reb" Grant. The home front is seeking advice in diplomacy from Susan Moore, a diplomat from the 21st century. She becomes the American President's closest advisor. They are leading the fight for ideals from the distant past. The project is based on the series of novels, "The Chronicles of Honor."

Auditions will be held in October 2018. Currently casting the pilot, but further roles will be available in the future. All ages, ethnicities, and genders are encouraged to apply.
